RECIPE

Ned's hazelnut & physallis cake

We love to challenge our Head Gardener to create recipes using produce from the Glut orchards. This year we think he's outdone himself with this luxuriously indulgent hazelnut cake, decorated with apples, physallis and caramel whiskers.

3 eggs
1 tsp ground cinnamon
1 tsp ground ginger
300g caster sugar
230g plain flour
1 tsp baking powder
230g butter, melted
3 apples, peeled and cored
150g roasted hazelnuts, roughly chopped
1 pack of physallis

* Heat the oven to 180C and line a 24cm loose bottomed cake tin with greaseproof paper.
* Set aside 70g of caster sugar for the caramel topping.
* Cut one apple into slices and set aside. Chop the remaining apples into bite-size chunks.
* Beat the eggs, spices and 230g of the caster sugar until foamy, and then stir in the flour and baking powder. Pour in the melted butter and beat well.
* Fold the chopped apple and hazelnuts into the cake batter, then pour into the lined tin and bake for an hour until golden and a cake tester comes out clean. Remove from the oven and set aside to cool.

* Whilst the cake is cooling, make the caramel by placing the remaining sugar in a small saucepan over a medium heat. Swirl the pan a little and when the sugar has turned into a light golden caramel, take the pan off the heat.
* Using tongs, dip the apple slices into the caramel, then arrange them artfully on top of the cake.
* Peel back the papery calyxes of the Physalis and dip them into the caramel before arranging them over the cake too.
* If the caramel solidifies, melt it again slightly, then draw strands of it from the pan with a wooden spoon, and swirl them around the cake to create caramelly whiskers.

RECIPE

Mulled cider & walnut cake

Mulled drinks were traditionally made by plunging a red hot poker into a vessel filled with alcohol and mulling spices, and stirring until the spicy flavours were thoroughly infused. You might not have a red hot poker to hand, but luckily, mulled cider is just as easy to make in a saucepan. And when you do, be sure to save a cupful for this deliciously fruity cake, which is perfect as a post gardening reward with a refreshing cup of tea.

200g sultanas
160ml mulled cider
175g light brown soft sugar
175g soft butter
2 eggs, beaten
200g self raising flour
½ tsp baking powder
¼ tsp mixed spice
¼ tsp cinnamon
25 chopped walnuts
50g sieved icing sugar

* Preheat oven to 180 /160 fan/ gas 6 and grease and line a square 20cm tin.
* Put the sultanas and cider into a small saucepan and bring to the boil. Stir well, turn the heat off, cover and leave for an hour or so, stirring occasionally until they have absorbed most of the liquid.

* Beat the butter with the sugar until pale and fluffy then beat in the eggs, adding a little of the flour if it starts to curdle.
* Mix the flour, baking powder and spices together and gradually add it to the cake batter. Stir through the sultanas and any liquid still in the saucepan. The mixture will be quite wet.
* Pour into the tin and smooth, then scatter the chopped walnuts evenly over the top.
* Bake for 45-50 minutes, until a cake tester comes out clean.
* Leave to cool in the tin on a cooling rack. Mix the cider and icing sugar together and drizzle over the cake.

jars and allow to cool to room temperature before storing in the fridge. Once sealed, it will happily keep for a few weeks.

RECIPE

Sweet & spicy chilli jam

If you're lucky enough to have a glut of tomatoes, why not turn them into a batch of tomato and chilli jam. Savoury jam is so easy to make, and you don't need to worry about setting points or getting the perfect consistency, as it tastes great whether it's fully set or a little loose. We made a big batch from the ripe fruit produced by our Red Hot Box and Tiny Tomato Growbar. The jam keeps well in the fridge, but it's so good you might just find yourself having to keep it under lock and key.

250g ripe tomatoes, cored and chopped in quarters, seeds left in 250g ripe tomatoes, finely chopped into 5mm dice, seeds left in
4-6 red chillies
4 cloves of garlic, roughly chopped
2 teaspoons chopped ginger
2 tbsp fish sauce
300g caster sugar, golden if you have it
100ml red wine vinegar

* In a food processor, blend the roughly chopped tomatoes, chillies, garlic, ginger and fish sauce to a fine puree.
* Place the puree in a strong saucepan and bring it to the boil slowly, stirring all the time. Turn down to a gentle simmer and add the chopped tomatoes. Cook gently for 60-70 minutes, stirring frequently so that it cooks evenly.
* Don't be tempted to let it boil furiously, as the perfect jam takes a little patience. When you reach a lovely, thick, jam like consistency, pour the mixture into sterilised

3. When your seedlings have grown four leaves, they are ready to be potted on or panted out.
